Crawford & Company appoints Head of Forensic Accounting for Continental Europe, Middle East & Africa

London – Crawford & Company has strengthened its forensic investigation and business interruption resource within its Continental Europe, Middle East and Africa (CEMEA) region with the recruitment of Ian Hasson.

Ian joins after 10 years as a forensic accountant at PricewaterhouseCoopers where he led its dispute resolution team in Zurich as well as leading teams across Europe on a number of high profile regulatory compliance investigations.

Prior to that, Ian worked in loss adjusting in the UK for nine years, managing both domestic and international major cases.

A qualified accountant and a qualified loss adjuster, Ian will have responsibility for managing the development of Crawford's Forensic Accountancy and Business Interruption Adjusting team in CEMEA.

“Ian’s appointment is great news for Crawford and its clients,” said Mark Harman, chief executive officer, Continental Europe, Middle East and Africa. “He brings to us a wealth of experience and a varied perspective which I know will contribute greatly to the growth of our Forensic Accountancy and Investigations service line.”

Speaking about his appointment, Ian commented: “I am delighted to be joining a highly experienced management team and working with them to strengthen and develop their Forensic Accountancy offering across the region. Crawford has an excellent reputation in the market and a truly global footprint so this will be a fascinating challenge.”
